

Transitional Care Coordination

---

What is Transitional Care Coordination?

Transitional Care Coordination is an evidence-informed intervention that removes barriers and establishes relationships using Warm Transitions, a strategic approach that combines social work and public health tools and techniques.

Transitional Care Coordination intervenes at individual, service and system levels using engagement strategies, right fit programs and community collaborations to improve outcomes for vulnerable populations.

---

What organizations benefit from Transitional Care Coordination?

Transitional Care Coordination addresses community needs and benefits health and human services, university research and government programs.

Transitional Care Coordination can benefit communities and enhance services at: alternatives to incarceration or sentencing programs, community health clinics, community corrections, correctional facilities, courts, diversion programs, employment services, health services, HIV/AIDS services, hospitals, homeless services, housing assistance, legal services, long term care, parole and probation, reentry programs, research universities, social services and substance use treatment.

---

Where can we learn more about Transitional Care Coordination?

- ☀ Transitional Care Coordination Tools + Tips Handbook
- ☀ Transitional Care Coordination Information and Training Materials

TOOLS + TIPS FOR PROVIDING TRANSITIONAL CARE COORDINATION HANDBOOK

Synthesizes program planning, implementation, and lessons learned, offering strategic approaches to:

- * implement, expand, and refine care coordination work.
- * negotiate and form partnerships to improve health outcomes.
- * identify medical alternatives to incarceration.
- * improve continuity from jail to community healthcare.
- * benefit health and hospital care, public health, HIV services, substance use and mental health, and jail health.

It can take just one individual to initiate improvement
and one team
to sustain it.

---

Let's stay in touch!

- ☀ Transitional Care Coordination can help you succeed.